You can't fight fires with a glass of water nor catch panthers with mousetraps. But that is exactly what this county has, on several occasions, tried to do. And what is more, it is sacrificing the lives of valiant men in its methods of coping with gunmen, hijackers and bootleggers. In every encounter with gangsters, the police are at a handicap because the gangster need spare no expense in outfitting their fast and expensive cars with bullet proof glass and the latest machine guns. They can have bullet proof vests and carefully selected guns. They are always prepared and can strike whenever and however they please.

The local police forces, possibly because of lack of funds, possibly because of lack of foresight on the part of the sheriff's office, are never on an equal footing. Bullet-proof vests to save the lives of brave deputies? Too expensive? Is anything too expensive that rids the district of hijackers and saves the lives of the defendants of the law?

A pertinent example of this condition is the gun battle last week in San Jose between hijackers and police deputies. Deputy Sheriff McAuley was killed and Deputy Sheriff Saporito was seriously injured in an attempt to arrest the occupants of a car who were thought to be kidnapping. In the first place, McAuley was shot through the heart. A bullet-proof vest would have saved his life, and probably the wounding of Saporito, who was shot in the stomach. In the second place, sending only two men out to stop a fast driven car believed to be full of desperate men was nothing short of criminal in itself. McAuley did not even have a chance to draw his gun and it was only the superb courage of Saporito that enabled him to disarm one of the criminals after he had been shot. In this particular case, as in so many others, the gangsters came out ahead of the police, with only one wounded. And the police have the entire community, the whole weight of law and order behind them.

There can be no effective checking of gangster activities until the police meet them on their own ground and by superior men (which they already have) superior equipment and superior protection (which they have not) wipe these murderers from the roads and towns of the district. Until we can get equipment and concentrated action as worthy of the cause of law and order as was McAuley and Saporito, we will be ruled by gangsters.

The problem of dealing with the well-equipped gangsters has proved to be a very difficult one in all communities where they have been allowed to get a start. New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and Detroit for example have found the problem almost more than they can handle, because, once the bootleggers are established, the profits from their illicit business is great enough to allow them to spend vast sums on protection and equipment. But in cities like Philadelphia and San Francisco, where the first signs of ruthless gang

FIRST MARKETING
INSTITUTE OPENS
TO AID GROWERS

Last Thursday afternoon and evening noted agricultural experts held a marketing institute at the Campbell grammar school for the benefit of the local orchardists. A large attendance at this first meeting gave promise of even greater response and popularity to these institutes.

Among the experts who spoke were T. O. Kluge of the Prune and Apricot association; Joseph A. Conner, manager of the Walnut Growers association, and B. A. Schommer, manager of the Poultry Producers. They gave observations on "Field and Garden Farm Products".

O. A. Harlan, manager of the California Prune and Apricot growers, spoke on effects of competition on quality and markets and Frank Swett told of some of the obstacles of the growers to successful co-operative farming.

Dr. Theodore Macklin, state marketing director closed the institute with a short summary of its work and the future position of this organization.

Entertains Members Of Pundita Club

Mrs. E. K. Clendenning entertained the members of Pundita Circle at her home on Parr avenue last Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Wendell Thomas and Mrs. B. O. Curry assisted the hostess in serving refreshments during the social hour.

Mrs. George Page, president of the Circle presided over the short business session during which plans for a Dad's Night were formulated. The Night will be held tomorrow night at the home of Mrs. Rose Hanger. A buffet supper will be served followed by an evening of whist.

The topic of the program for the day was California Trees. Mrs. Anna Schulte read two poems, "The Lumber Yard" and "The Cypressess of Monterey". Mrs. L. J. Carboni read the poem, "Trees" by Joyce Kilmer and sang a solo "The Mighty Oak". Mrs. Hanger discussed the old English superstitions regarding oak-apples.

The Campbell Union High school band, orchestra and Glee Club will give a free concert Friday evening, December 11. The concert is expected to be very good this year and will be held in the grammar school auditorium. Mrs. Thielke will conduct the three features of the evening.

formations is an immediate challenge to a well-equipped police force, gang warfare has been kept to a minimum. This is a short object lesson for this community. If we are to be freed from recurrences of affairs like McAuley shooting it will be because we have a police force strong and active enough and well enough equipped to fight the gangster with at least an equal chance. Now is the time to stop rum-running, hijacking and machine gun killings, not later.

KIWANIS LAUNCH
CAMPAIGN TO AID
COMMUNITY POOR

A campaign to provide our needy and destitute families with food, clothing and shelter for the winter was inaugurated here Saturday under the leadership of the local Kiwanis club. Ralph Hyde was appointed chairman of the Kiwanis committee in charge of the relief work. The Community Relief Society has issued an urgent appeal to the community for any and all clothing that can be spared for these families, many of whom are in rags.

"All loyal citizens should do their utmost to help our neighborhood through this trying winter by giving any clothing they do not need. I assure all of you that a very worthy use will be found for every garment given," said Mrs. W. I. Merrill who is in charge of the work for the Community Relief Society.

A depot has been opened in the I. O. O. F. building where volunteer workers will receive donations every Saturday from 1 to 5 p. m.

The Kiwanis have appointed Guy Farley, Rev. A. S. Buell, Mark Purmort and Rev. J. H. Bennett to assist Ralph Hyde in the work.

CANADIAN POLITICS
SUBJECT DISCUSSED
BY WOMEN'S CLUB

Another very interesting program in the series of studies of Canada was presented Monday afternoon at a meeting of the Country Woman's Club.

Mrs. Leigh Saunders presided and in her paper dealt with the "Political Relations Between the United States and Canada" during the period of their history following the adoption of the constitution by the States to quite recent times.

During all of that period only one break in the settlement of difficulties by arbitration occurred, the War of 1812, and that the result of war between England and France.

The settlement of the international boundary, the Alaskan fisheries, questions arising from the fur trade, the gold strike in the Yukon, and all other controversies have been amicably settled not always entirely pleasing to both sides but accepted by them peacefully.

The events of the period during and following the Great War were clearly and fully set forth in a paper written by Mrs. W. H. Stray and read by Mrs. G. S. Robson as Mrs. Stray was unable to be present on account of illness.

The chief difficulties of this era have been caused by tariffs and the prohibition problems. Neither of which is completely adjusted but is still being worked out.

The great factor that permeates all of our international dealings was stated by Mrs. MacLaughlin Sunday evening "these two countries have a will of peace toward each other which makes possible the functioning of the International Commission of six judges, three from each country that meets twice yearly, once in the United States and once in Canada."

A very fine musical program had been arranged by Mrs. Donald Page, the third

Water Conservation
Topic of Grange

During the lecture hour the Grange was entertained by the Keessling family orchestra.

A report from the committee on the bazaar showed that a large sum had been obtained from that affair for the Grange building fund.

Japan Still Defies League of Nations and China Threatens—Groener Asks Fair Play for Germany in Armaments.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

THERE is no war in Manchuria because, as the League of Nations and other authorities agree, there cannot be war until a competent government has declared war. But there have been bloody battles up there almost every day, and the situation during the week was getting worse. The league council was to meet again on November 16, and it was confronted with the fact that Japan had not heeded its order to withdraw her troops by that date, with the added aggravation that Tokyo had reiterated the statement that it would not obey the order and would make no concessions to the league.

Then China came to bat with a statement by its representative at Geneva, Dr. Alfred Sze. In a note expressing his government's conditional acceptance of the one-year arms holiday Doctor Sze told the league secretariat flatly that if the league covenant and the Kellogg pact should fall in the Manchurian crisis, China would build up her fighting forces to protect herself against Japan. Before that he had asked the league to send an international force to police the Manchurian railway zone.

Gen. Ma Chan-shan, commanding the Chinese troops in southern Manchuria, was said to have attacked the Japanese at the Nonni river bridge which the latter were repairing, and after a sanguinary conflict the Chinese were driven off. But they did not go far, and at the last report were gathering for another attack; and more Japanese soldiers were on their way hurriedly to the scene. There were other battles, but this was the biggest.

What was more alarming to foreign nations was the spread of the fighting to the big city of Tientsin. This began with outbreaks of Chinese mobs that attacked the Japanese concession. The Japanese officials said the disorders were due to the fighting of Chinese factions and that the real motive of the Chinese was to occupy the foreign concessions in the city; so the Japanese forces went into action "for protection" and shelled the Chinese. American, French and other troops were held ready to act, but at this writing had not been called on to do anything.

In the background of all the trouble is Henry Pu Yi, who as Hsuan Tung was the last Manchu emperor of China. The young man is a quiet renting householder in the Japanese concession in Tientsin, but loyal monarchists have always been about him, and now it is asserted that there is afoot a plan to separate Manchuria from China and put Henry on the throne. With this in view, it is said, many thousands of troops have been gathered together by Gen. Liang In-Ching, former ally of the Manchu dynasty and for years the enemy of the Chang family now headed by Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang. It is true most of these reports come from Japanese sources, but they have the ring of truth.

Ambassador Dawes was instructed to go to the league meeting.

WHAT Germany can and will do and what she asks the other powers to do for her continue of absorbing interest to the world. The reich's stand on disarmament was set forth by Gen. Wilhelm Groener, the brilliant soldier, who is now minister of war and minister of the interior and who may succeed Von Hindenburg as president.

"Germany has the right to the same treatment as all other nations," General Groener said. "She is entitled to the same security and to the same methods of disarmament as other nations. It was expressly guaranteed in 1919 that the other powers would follow the path Germany took when she was disarmed."

"When we disarmed we were forbidden to possess heavy artillery, tanks, war planes, submarines, and warships over 10,000 tons. Even anti-aircraft artillery was prohibited. Military conscription was forbidden, and Germany was instructed, even to the slightest detail, on how to organize her army."

"Therefore we object to the drafts of the disarmament agreement as worked out by the preparatory disarmament commission at Geneva. It is a violation of the principle of the equality of nations if it tries to make eternal the difference between the victors and the vanquished by freeing the victors of their obligations to disarm and making the vanquished bear the full brunt of the disarmament clauses in the Versailles treaty."

CONFERENCES and conversations in Paris and Berlin concerning reparations and war debts were held behind closed doors, but it was reliably reported that the French government sent word to Berlin that whatever concessions are made to meet the German situation must be only temporary and within the framework of the Young plan; that France will not agree that Germany's private debts shall be given precedence over reparations payments; and that if there is any permanent reduction in the conditional part of the Young plan annuities, it must be accompanied by a corresponding reduction in the war debts owing to the United States.

Germany, on the other hand, is evidently seeking to take advantage of her present economic distress to obtain a great permanent reduction of reparations, or even their complete obliteration. The French nationalists are determined that Premier Laval shall not abandon the principle of reparations, no matter what pressure Germany brings to bear.

OUR political pot is already seething and bubbling and there is a lot of talk, loose and otherwise about next year's campaign. Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska gave voice in Washington in a few characteristic opinions. The insurgent Republican made a strong attack on the policies of Mr. Hoover, and seemed to the correspondents about ready to participate in a bolt of radicals from the G. O. P. ticket that presumably will be put up next summer. Here are a few of the things the Nebraskan said:

"If we are to keep men employed, why discharge them? It may be necessary in some instances for private industry to reduce its employment, but there is no justification for the government discharging workers."

"If we expect industry to keep men at work the government ought to set an example, because the government is the largest employer in the nation. I favor a bond issue to cover the emergency and provide work for the unemployed. I do not favor bond issues in peace times, but this is an emergency tantamount to war conditions. I mean a bond issue, not to provide charity, but to provide jobs by road building and other federal construction. Instead of fighting over the dote the government ought to provide work for its jobless citizens."

Concerning the world court Senator Norris said: "I shall favor American adherence only if a reservation is adopted requiring the senate's approval before any controversial issue, involving the United States, may be submitted to the court for decision."

DEATH having removed from the senate the forcible and picturesque Thaddeus H. Caraway of Arkansas, the Democrats of that state are considering the choice of his successor. The suggestion has been made and well received, that the senator's widow, Mrs. Hattie Caraway, be nominated to fill out the unexpired term. This would be tantamount to her election. Mrs. Caraway is said to be willing to accept the office. She is a close student of public affairs and has been a charming and popular hostess in the Lord Baltimore mansion, a colonial home just over on the Maryland line near Washington.

COMING back to the supposed opposition in the Republican ranks to the renomination of President Hoover, which if it exists will probably be futile, it is interesting to note that Senator Hiram W. Johnson of California is going to visit Chicago for the purpose of finding out what support he would receive in Illinois if he became a candidate. Some of the Republican leaders of the city and state said they would give the matter serious thought, and they were rather of the opinion that Johnson might be approved by all or part of the Illinois delegation in the convention. They cited the fact that the Californian has opposed all of the Hoover policies that proved most unpopular in this part of the country, and also they thought his coming into Illinois as a Presidential entrant in the April primaries might help their state ticket. Those of them who oppose Mr. Hoover had heretofore had no one to suggest except Frank O. Lowden.

SMALL-minded people revealed in the news that C. Van Ness Leavitt, a brother-in-law of President Hoover, was arrested in Santa Monica, Calif., on charges of violating the state prohibition law. A police officer and two dry agents who were raiding speakeasies there found Leavitt in an alley holding a sack containing nineteen pints of liquor, and he was released after pleading not guilty. Leavitt said some one handed him the sack while he was visiting in a hotel and asked him to take it out the back door and get rid of it, and that he acquiesced as a friendly service, not knowing the sack contained liquor. The owner of the store, also arrested, said he believed the sack was brought in by a bootlegger fleeing from the police. Altogether a trivial affair, made news only by Leavitt's relationship to the President.

RUMANIA's royal family has supplied the world with another romance. This time it is Prince Nicholas, brother of King Carol and princess Ileana, who is the central figure. Nicholas met accidentally and fell in love with Mme. Deletj, the divorced daughter-in-law of a former cabinet minister. He asked Carol for permission to marry her and the king refused, whereupon Nicholas climbed into his automobile, picked up the lady and drove at top speed 125 miles to the village of Tohan. There he compelled the mayor to perform the marriage ceremony, and the happy couple rushed away, while the terrified mayor telephoned the news to Bucharest.

So far as is known, the king has not relented enough to recognize the marriage as even a morganatic union. But he probably will not take severe measures, for he is fond of his brother and gives him much credit for his own success in gaining the throne of Rumania. Then, of course, Carol cannot fail to remember his own affairs in the past. Prince Nicholas, who is twenty-eight years old, accompanied his mother, Queen Marie, and the Princess Ileana on their tour of America in 1926.

OBSERVANCE of Armistice day was the occasion of innumerable ceremonies and addresses in all parts of the country, and in the lands of the allied nations as well. President Hoover, of course, led our nation in observing the day. In the morning, accompanied by General Pershing, Secretary of War Hurley and Secretary of the Navy Adams, he went to Arlington cemetery and laid a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. At eleven o'clock, the hour symbolic of the ending of the war, the President was in West Potomac park, where he dedicated the beautiful marble temple which the people of Washington have built as a memorial to the soldiers who went from the District of Columbia. In the afternoon Mr. Hoover paid a visit to the old frigate Constitution at the Washington navy yard.

General Pershing and American Legion officials participated in a commemorative program in the evening, and the Carnegie endowment for international peace held a mass meeting which was addressed by Houston Thompson and Frederic R. Coudert.

WILLIAM L. EDISON, second son of the late Thomas A. Edison, who intends to contest the great inventor's will, issued a statement at Wilmington, Del., in which he said he believed interests opposed to him are trying to establish the impression that he was not always on friendly terms with his father. As proof, that this is untrue he pointed out that when both had perfected like radio equipment he (William) did not market his set in opposition to his father's even though it was patented.

"I have had the highest regard for every member of my father's family," he said, "and never since his second marriage has there been a single instance of unpleasantness either with my stepmother or any of my full or half sisters and brothers."

"Until the conditions of my father's will and codicil were revealed no disagreement of importance ever had come between us. Even now I do not intend to allow the case to degenerate into attacks on personalities."

Edison's will left the bulk of the estate to Charles and Theodore Edison, the two youngest sons.

KIWANIS NOTES

By Heck

Ralph Hyde completed the reports today on the district convention held at Pasadena early in November. Dr. Frank Anderson and Jim Dempsey started the report at the regular Kiwanis luncheon last week.

Next Tuesday evening the Kiwanis are giving a turkey Thanksgiving dinner to the Campbell baseball team. The regular Tuesday luncheon will not be held that day.

play Live Oak Friday night, November 20 at Campbell. This will be the championship game for the 110's as they have so far been undefeated.

The contest between the 120's is also important. If the 120's win in this game they will be tied for first place for championship with the Santa Clara cagers.

The starting line-up for the 110's will be Bondon and Bloom, forwards; Lear and Vezzusi, guards; Stafford or Raabe, center.

The line-up for the 120's will probably be DeSelle and Hall, forwards; Mirassou and Mattusch, guards; Lobrovich, center.

These two games promise to be the fastest and most thrilling of the season.

AKRON MAY VISIT CALIFORNIA NEXT SPRING, REPORT

Congressman A. M. Free is in receipt of the following letter from the Navy Department in regard to the flight of the Dirigible AKRON to California:

My Dear Congressman Free: Your letter of October 8, 1931, requesting that the AKRON be flown over Northern California, is acknowledged.

The Department contemplates the erection of a mooring mast at Sunnyvale sometime in the Spring of 1932, and has in mind that the AKRON will take part in the fleet maneuvers off the coast of California at that time. However, plans to this end have not been crystallized; a certain amount of work is necessary on the AKRON before she is ready for service with the fleet; and therefore, the Department does not care at this moment to make any promises as to any future flights of that airship.

RADIO TELEPHONE SERVICE AVAILABLE TO HONOLULU, T.H.

"Sky-waves," rivalling the Arabian tales, will be shot 200 miles high against the surface of an upper atmosphere known as the "heavyside layer," above the ocean between America and Hawaii, then caromed down to Honolulu—all in the flicker of an eyelash—when the human voice is carried by transpacific radiotelephone service, opening early next month.

The electric waves will be "bounced" against the upper roof of the world by a transmitting antenna of a new type, known as the horizontal Double-V, developed during the past year. This type of antenna is designed to project "sky-waves," as distinguished from "ground-waves" since sky-waves are the type of short waves needed to transmit over lone distances.

The transmitting station for the Hawaiian service is at Dixon, California, 20 miles southwest of Sacramento. The receiving station is at Point Reyes, 35 miles north of San Francisco.

Both the Dixon and Point Reyes stations have recently been completed, and equipment installed with a total investment of about $750,000 by Transpacific Communication Co., Ltd., which will operate the new transoceanic circuit. This company is a subsidiary of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. Tests of apparatus are now being made.

The circuits set up by these stations will link the Bell System with the Mutual Telephone Co. in Hawaii. Dixon will transmit to a station at Koko Head, 12 miles from Honolulu and Point Reyes will receive from a station at Kahuku Point, 30 miles from that city. These stations in Hawaii will be operated by the Radio Corporation of America.

The Dixon transmitting station has a maximum power while transmitting the voice of 20,000 watts. It will use several frequencies between 7,000 and 21,000 kilocycles, corresponding to a range of 40 to 14 meters respectively. Should a wave length less than 12 meters be used, the "sky-waves" would not be reflected by the "heavyside layer" but would pass on through it.

San Francisco will be the control point for all North American calls through the transpacific stations. Control boards, with monitoring attendants will be located in the Grant avenue long distance office of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co., which will handle all transpacific calls over it lines. The transpacific calls will all pass through the same switchboard, with the same operators now employed in handling transcontinental and the transoceanic calls to Europe, Asia, Australia, and South America from Northern California.
